

Mary was married to a knife-thrower. The heels on her new shoes were higher than the ones on the old pair.

Blindfolded, her husband, whom she wished to surprise, was unaware of the difference in height and threw the knives at the usual height.

After setting off on holiday, a woman stopped at a motorway restaurant, leaving her husband asleep in the caravan behind the car.

But he woke up and went to the toilet while she was still in the restaurant. When he came back, his unsuspecting wife had driven off without him.

The driver of a concrete-mixer was being cheated on by his wife. One evening, finding the lover's car parked outside his door again, he dumped the entire load of concrete into the car through an open window.

His wife's lover, however, had already returned to his car and had fallen asleep inside.

Jonathan was window cleaning near the top of a high-rise. Before finishing work, he used the mirror-like façade of the building to tidy his hair because his new girlfriend was waiting for him down below.

Finally, Jonathan decided to check his appearance 'in full' and took one (last) step backwards.